1. On 1 October 1951, source learned that all German women employed in barracks installations in Schwerin (M 54/T 46) would be discharged and replaced by Russian women by 1 November. Russian women, who arrived at the post on 5 and 27 September, were billeted in the Schlossgarten quarters and subsequently reassigned to the individual barracks installations. The movement of troops from the Schlossgarten quarters to Schwerin-Coerries had not been effected by 4 October, because the officers involved had objected to the condition of the billets in building No 18 in Schwerin-Coerries. Despite this delay, the forthcoming release of the houses in the Schlossgarten quarters was announced to the Land Government in Schwerin*. On 3 October, source learned that Engineer Unit [redacted] commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Zimon (fnu) and previously quartered in the Hindenburg Kaserne on Guestrowerstrasse, Schwerin, was engaged in field exercises in the Ludwigslust (M 54/T 53) area. It was said that the engineer unit would not return to the Hindenburg Kaserne upon completion of the exercises, but source was unable to determine the destination of the unit. The quarters vacated by the engineer unit were to be taken over by Rocket Launcher Unit [redacted] under the command of Colonel Yegorov (fnu). It was rumored that the rocket launcher unit would be reinforced and that some of the quarters in the Hindenburg Kaserne would be converted into officers' billets and the attics into RM dormitories. Three target ranges in the ammunition depot at Sternbuchholz were provided with roofs for the Artillery Unit [redacted] in the Krueger Kaserne on Ludwigsluster Chaussee. In addition, a storage shed with a floor space of 140 square meters was erected in the ammunition depot.

Since a maximum of 12 rocket launchers had been previously observed with the unit, indicating that the rocket launcher unit had only battalion strength, the present report seems to imply that the unit is now to be brought up to regimental strength with 32 to 36 rocket launchers. 25X1A
